I am not an American citizen. I hail from Canada. You may feel that I would have no input on such an American struggle as what is gripping the American computing world. You would be mistaken. The Final Judgment against Microsoft would have as large an impact to us in Canada as to you in the US. Many of our computer firms stand on the brink of disaster here in Canada, as many more do in the US. Microsoft has been found guilty of anti-trust and must be made to work fairly. Please find it in your hearts to believe in the coming truths of our new age; if you do not see fit to reduce Microsoft's threat against our livelihoods by placing its operating systems in trustworthy hands, then please reduce the damage it does by forcing it to use open standards. No one can win when only one person defines what it means to work America, just as no one won when Adolf Hitler defined what it meant to work Germany.
